FROM THE DIRECTOR

The demand for IIPA's programmes within the country and abroad continued to rise and, in the year under report (2008-2009), we would have been in a position to finally break even were it not for some delay of payments in respect of training programmes conducted for the Government of Nepal, funded by the Ministry of External Affairs, and the late receipt of rent from the National Institute of Disaster Management (NIDM). The amount has since been received and it will be our endeavour to see that the Institute breaks even in financial year 2009-2010.

One positive development has been the widespread support we have received from the Ministries and Departments of the Government of India. Orders have been placed with CDAC for providing state of art ICT facilities including Video Conferencing and a renovated computer class room. In pursuance of the allocation of Rs. 10 crore under the current plan, funds have been made available to the CPWD for upgrading all the office rooms and those in the Hostel. Our other priorities include the changing of electrical wiring and water pipes in our two main buildings, which is long overdue in addition to faculty development, with a focus on the training of trainers and the recruitment of new faculty..

Work on raising the roads will be taken up this year but the problem of flooding continues to bedevil us on account of the fact that ours is a low lying area.

I am happy to report that the faculty members of the IIPA and the staff have faced up to the challenges posed by the constraint of funds and have responded well by garnering more projects in the areas of training, research and consultancy in the year 2008-2009. The support of all our customers mainly Government Departments, has been a source of strength and the current economic downturn has had little effect on our activities.

34th Advanced Professional Programme in Public Administration

The Advanced Professional Programme in Public Administration (APPPA) is a nine-month education-cum-training programme designed for senior level officers of the Government of India. Successful candidates are awarded a Master's Diploma in Public Administration (MDPA) of IIPA. An M.Phil Degree in Social Sciences of Panjab University, Chandigarh is also awarded to those participants who hold post-graduate degrees. The programme is sponsored by the Ministry of Personnel, Public Grievances and Pensions, Government of India. The 34th APPPA was inaugurated by Shri T.N. Chaturvedi, Chairman, IIPA on 1 July, 2008.

The programme was attended by 45 participants from the All-India, Central and Defence Services.

The objectives of the APPPA (2008-2009) were to:

- Analyse major contemporary issues that have implications for public policy and public management;
- Understand recent developments in the social sciences and their application in administration;
- Review their experiences by making a critical analysis of environmental and other factors impinging upon the functioning of the administrative system;
- Apply relevant concepts, skills and techniques relating to governance; and

- Demonstrate their creative and analytical ability, individually and in groups.

The 34th Advanced Programme consisted of Foundation Courses consisting of subjects such as Public Administration, Society, Polity and Public Policy, Elements of Economic Theory, Administrative Law, Research Methods and Computer and Web Based Applications. The following eighteen options were offered for a more specialised study: Administrative Challenges in a Federal Polity, Consumer Protection: Law and Practice, E-Governance, Emerging Economic Issues, Environment & Disaster Risk Reduction, Financial Management, Operations Research, Organizational Management, Chronic Poverty: Concepts and Issues, Gender and Development, Human Resource Development, Human Rights and Internal Security, Human Values and Ethics, Public Finance and Social Justice & Affirmative Action. The courses were administered through a series of lectures and discussions, case studies and evaluated through group discussions, individual presentations, term papers and written examinations. Apart from an extensive course-work, the programme also included three field studies – a foreign study, rural study and urban study.

As a part of the foreign study, the participants visited Capetown and Pretoria in South Africa and Luxor and Cairo in Egypt during January 18-29, 2009. The purpose of the study in South Africa was primarily to focus on Social Inclusion Policies and Political Institutions, especially decentralization with reference to provincial governments, and the role of civil society institutions, post apartheid. In Egypt the study focused on recent innovations in public service management, the sustainability of development schemes and the proposed social contract programmes. On their return the participants prepared reports on important subjects such as Managing Diversity – Post Apartheid, Public Service Management, Federalism and Provincial Government, Participatory Management, Prison Policy and Administration and Agro Industry Policy in South Africa and Tourism Management, Education & Health, Sustainable Development, Social Sector Initiatives and Civil Society, the State of Gender Relations and Public Service Innovations in Egypt.

The participants presented their group reports - at a Seminar held on the 12th and 13th March, 2009, when senior officials from the High Commission of South Africa and Egyptian embassy attended the presentation given by the groups of participants. Chairman IIPA, Shri T.N. Chaturvedi and the Director chaired the sessions.

The rural and urban field study is aimed at providing an opportunity to develop an in-depth understanding about the diverse, but important issues related to rural and urban areas. Participants consisting of small groups visited six destinations in different regions of the country. The rural destinations visited were Jodhpur and Jaisalmer (Rajasthan), Gurgaon (Haryana) and Kangra and Kinnaur (Himachal Pradesh). These visits were undertaken during November 10-14, 2008. The urban destinations visited were Gurgaon (Haryana), Amritsar (Punjab) and Dehradun (Uttarakhand), were undertaken during November 24-28, 2008. The reports on rural and urban field studies were also presented at a Seminar held on December 23-24, 2008 and January 9, 2009 respectively.

The most important component of the programme consisted of the submission of a dissertation by each participant and its defense through a presentation and a viva-voce. These dissertations were evaluated by leading academicians and administrators. Participants also presented these during a dissertation presentation Seminar to which experts were invited for comments and evaluation.

The Convocation of the 34th APPPA was held on 31st March, 2009. The convocation address of Shri K.M. Chandrasekhar, Cabinet Secretary, Government of India 'in absentia' was read by Prof. Aasha Kapur Mehta. Shri T.N. Chaturvedi, Chairman, IIPA distributed diplomas to the successful participants of the 34th APPPA. Concluding Remarks and a vote of thanks came from Dr. Yogendra Narain, Chairman, Standing Committee, IIPA and Prof. S.K. Ghosh, Programme Co-Director (APPPA) respectively. Shri Ajay Sawhney, Joint Secretary, Shri Vineet Pandey, Department of Personnel and Training, were also present on the occasion along with other distinguished guests.

RESEARCH AND CONSULTANCY STUDIES/PROJECTS

Research Studies

During the year, the following research studies were completed and reports submitted to the respective sponsoring agencies.

1. Women in Agriculture in South Asia sponsored by Aga Khan Foundation and International Food Policy Research Institute by Prof. Aasha Kapur Mehta.

Objectives and Methodology

The objectives were to complete the following tasks for the Aga Khan Foundation - International Food Policy Research Institute Workshop on Women in Agriculture:

- Review the case studies and research papers received and advise on the selection of presentations proposed for each of the three sessions for the Theme 'Access to Productive Resources and Services'
- Prepare a paper on this Theme and present the keynote address at the International Workshop.

The method required was to prepare the paper for the Theme 'Access to Productive Resources and Services' on the basis of the approaches and lessons from the case studies and research papers being invited for the three sessions pertaining to it.

The following issues need attention:

- a. Invisibility of women in government records, research studies and census - this leads to the absence of planning for women, and incorporating their needs and priorities.
- b. What are the difficulties faced by women in getting titles to land and actually tilling the land? What mediation has been helpful in ensuring access to land? Why has existing legislation not been used very much? How can we strengthen institutional efforts to deal with land distribution and land disputes?
- c. Around 77% of land holdings in the country are less than a hectare in size. From the smallest patch of land, high food security gains can be ensured. Ownership is an important issue, so we should not underestimate the impact of women owning even small plots of land. How can support be provided to ensure that we maximise productivity of the crops that women consider critical for food security?

- d. What can be done to ensure access to water, both for irrigation and clean drinking water as these are priorities.
- e. In the context of NTFP, do poor tribal have access rights? What are the mechanisms for collection and sale of the NTFP? What extension and research interventions would enable higher returns to accrue to tribal women?
- f. In Orissa we see that Kendu leaves which are primarily gathered by the tribal women are charged more royalty than bauxite which is used by industries. In cases related to displacement and rehabilitation we see that coercive action is taken where the laws are loaded against single women, widows, deserted women etc.
- g. What are the minimum resources needed by a household to enable earning an adequate income from agriculture and allied activities? What can be done to diversify the livelihood option base as this can diversify risk and, at the same time, increase employment opportunities?
- h. Can a strong migration tracking system and an effective remittance mechanism be set up?
- i. What specific agriculture extension strategies targeting women need to be developed?
- j. Women need to be included in the formal banking system as well as MFIs. SHGs need to move beyond savings and credit to enterprise development with effective institutional linkages. Capacity building and hand-holding is required to ensure that they move from micro-finance to entrepreneurship.
- k. Partnerships and convergence could be the way forward. What steps need to be taken to enable this?

Outputs

- i. Advised the Aga Khan Foundation on selection of case studies and papers for presentation at the Workshop. (Prof. Aasha Kapur Mehta).

- ii. Prepared a paper entitled "Women in Agriculture: Access to Productive Resources and Services." Presented the keynote address at the Aga Khan Foundation and International Food Policy Research Institute Workshop on "Women in Agriculture in South Asia" at the National Agriculture Science Centre, Pusa, New Delhi on 12 August 2008. (Prof. Aasha Kapur Mehta).
2. National Flood Control Evaluation Project (NFCEP) sponsored by the Ministry of Water Resources.
3. Evaluation Study of Micro & Small Enterprises Cluster Development Programmes sponsored by the Ministry of Micro, Small & Medium Enterprises, Govl.

Besides, details of six ongoing research projects are shown at Annexures F.1(a) and F.1(b) respectively.

Consultancy Projects/Assignments

The Institute completed the following six consultancy assignments during the year:

1. Identify mechanisms for large scale investments in irrigation, both by the Centre and State Governments and on intra – State and Inter – State projects sponsored by the Ministry of Water Resources by Prof. Pranab Banerji.

Introduction

After the success story of the Green Revolution of the 1970s and 1980s, the country's agriculture is presently passing through a crisis. Agricultural production, which recorded an annual growth rate of 4.7 per cent during the Eighth Plan (1992-97), has been growing at an average rate of barely two per cent per annum in the last ten years. Foodgrain production in 2006-07 was no better than the level reached in 2001-02.

The current crisis faced by Indian agriculture is due, inter alia, to the slow growth of irrigation and the poor maintenance of the existing irrigation structures which expanded at the rate that was "one third less than the maximum growth achieved in the past".

It may also be noted that there is a negative correlation between irrigation and the incidence of rural poverty. Generally, poverty incidence is low in states such as Punjab and Haryana, which have a high percentage of area under irrigation. Assured irrigation provides the basic conditions necessary for the adoption of high yielding varieties of seeds, higher cropping intensity and production of high value crops. This generates an increase in incomes, employment and wages and therefore lowers the incidence of poverty.

It is in this context that the Eleventh Five Year Plan (2007-12) aims at doubling the agricultural growth rate to about 4 percent per annum. To achieve the higher rate of growth, it proposes, inter alia, to double the rate of growth of irrigated areas and improve water management, rainwater harvesting and watershed development. It has long been felt that the decline in public investment in agriculture may be a significant factor underlying agricultural stagnation. The Bharat Nirman Programme, designed to substantially augment public investment in infrastructure, also envisaged the creation of 10 million hectares of additional irrigated area during the period 2005-09. The Approach Paper to the Eleventh Plan talks about the creation of 11 million hectares of new potential during the plan. These targets, however, are lower than 16 million hectares recommended by the "Working Group on Water Resources for the XI Five Year Plan (2007-12)".

Objectives & Methodology

It is against this background that the Ministry of Water Resources, GOI approached the IIPA and the National Institute of Financial Management (NIFM) to examine the issue of irrigation finance and suggest ways for innovative funding of irrigation projects. The study was to be based on survey of existing literature and reports. The findings of the interim report were presented in a validation workshop hosted by the Ministry of Water Resources.

Conclusions & Recommendations of the Study

1. The capital costs for increasing irrigation coverage are high and rising because a greater emphasis has been placed on major and medium projects. Placing greater emphasis on traditional and minor irrigation methods can reduce the overall cost of irrigation investments.
2. The financial requirements for irrigation development in the Eleventh Plan have been,

(by the Working Group on Water Resources) estimated at Rs. 2,31,800 crore. This may be an underestimation as the actual costs of both the MMI & MI schemes are considerably higher.

3. There are direct and indirect sources of financing irrigations projects. Although the direct receipt from irrigation projects is a paltry sum compared to the costs involved, yet the farmers (the agricultural sector) are implicitly taxed. As a recent study has concluded "it is not farmers that are riding on the back of rest of society for financing its irrigation needs, but the other way round".
4. Irrigation projects have been increasingly financed through debt capital. Although this reduces the immediate burden on the state exchequer, debt capital does not provide a sustainable basis for irrigation investments.
5. Since there are strong externalities of irrigation projects, there is a good case for funding irrigation investments through taxation. As the resource base of the states is small, the centre should finance such investment. As in the case of development of roads, a cess could be imposed on the incomes of the non-agricultural sector to finance irrigation development. The possibility of raising private equity capital for irrigation development remains remote at present.
6. A greater amount should be spent on operation and maintenance of existing systems. The measures taken following the Vaidyanathan Committee Report, including participatory irrigation management, are in the right direction and help to reduce transaction costs and to improve distribution.
2. An International Consultancy Project, the Afghan e-Quality Alliance, for capacity building for setting up a Centre for Public Policy & Administration at Kabul University under the aegis of the Washington State University & US Aid with IIPA as a partner institution along with TERI, & TISS was sponsored by the USAID. Washington State University. Prof. Jaytilak Guha Roy was the Principal Investigator, Prof. Bharati Sharma, Prof. Rajesh Singh, Prof. Suresh Misra were the members of the IIPA Team.

Prof. Jaytilak Guha Roy and Prof. Suresh Misra conducted two courses on Public Administration;

Theory and Practice on February 19-22, 2007 and December 2 -7, 2007 under this project and Prof. Bharati Sharma and Prof. Rajesh Singh one on Organisation Behaviour and Management. This project's goal is Capacity Building of members of the Afghan Civil Service and faculty of Kabul University.

3. Preparation of status papers on Administrative Reforms sponsored by the Second Administrative Reforms Commission - Prof. Sujata Singh.
4. Consultancy on Effective Functioning of Information and Facilitation Counters sponsored by the Department of Administrative Reforms and Public Grievances - Prof. Dolly Arora.

This assignment involved an evaluation of the state of the Information and Facilitation Counters set up by the Government of India Ministries/ Department and organizations. It examined the challenges which confront the effectiveness of IFCs and explored possible ways of addressing these. Thirty-five IFCs, based in Delhi, were visited and closely examined from the viewpoint of their effectiveness. A questionnaire was developed for the Contact Officers and Counter In-charges. The responses obtained were analysed. Discussions were held with the latter and the users/ visitors present during the visit to the IFCs, as also, with some civil society groups. Contact Officers for the IFCs were also approached to discuss the issues and problems faced.

The workshop that was organized to discuss the outcome also raised issues of (i) access and visibility (ii) infrastructure and facilities (iii) mandate and capacity of IFCs to meet the information needs of citizens and (iv) alternative approaches towards meeting the objectives of the IFCs.

An Action Plan for the DAR&PG and concerned organizations was adopted for addressing the effectiveness of IFCs and the possible strategies for their revitalization/ structural transformation.

5. Consultancy on Formulation, Implementation and Evaluation of Citizen's Charters sponsored by the Department of Administrative Reforms and Public Grievances - Prof. Dolly Arora.

This consultancy for DARPG involved an exercise towards improving the formulation and implementation of Citizen's Charters by the Government of India's Ministries/ Departments/ Organisations. As a part of this exercise, a review of 47 existing Citizen's Charters available on the website of DARPG was undertaken; The status of Charter implementation as well as administrative perceptions about the Charter programme was its objectives, instruments and significance were assessed on the basis of a detailed questionnaire. Based on the analysis and discussions with stakeholders, a document entitled "Framework of Citizen's Charter" was developed.

A workshop was organised with DAR&PG for the nodal officers for Citizen's Charters of Ministries/ Departments/ Organisations and the findings of review of Citizen's Charters as well as the 'framework' of Citizen's Charters was reviewed. Besides, a wide range of issues related to formulation and implementation of Citizen's Charters which confronted the participating organizations were also discussed.

The "Framework of Citizen's Charter" has been loaded on the website of the DAR&PG with the intent to enable the Ministries/Departments/Organisations to develop/ review their existing Charters in consultation with their employees and client groups/ stakeholders.

The draft Citizen's Charters of eighteen Ministries/ Departments/ Organisations, sent by the DARPG for comments, were reviewed and observations and suggestions on these were provided. It was also recommended that the organisations should engage their employees at various levels as well as the stakeholders for the purpose of formulation of their Charter and arrive at the specific commitments which an organisation should make with regard to prescribed standards, without which these would remain only a symbolic exercise.

6. Consultancy on Installation of a Public Grievance Redress Mechanism (PGRAM) in the Govt. of India Ministries and Department sponsored by the Department of Administrative Reforms and Public Grievances by Prof. Dolly Arora.

This assignment involved an assessment of the state of public grievance (PG) redressal mechanisms and processes in the Government of India's, Ministries and Departments as well as some of their organizations. A detailed questionnaire, aimed at obtaining information about the state of grievance redress machinery and processes, especially the state of CPGRAM, its utilization and effectiveness, was sent to all Ministries of the Government of India. Some of them forwarded it to the Departments under them; some others sent these to their attached, subordinate and autonomous organizations.

PG Cells of various Ministries and Departments were also visited and discussions were held with the officers and visitors available. The responses obtained through the questionnaires were supplemented by discussions, which took place during the Workshop on the theme organized jointly with the DAR&PG, in which the Public Grievance Officers of several organizations participated.

A final report incorporating case studies and Action Plan for DAR&PG and organizations concerned aimed at the institution of an effective, efficient, responsive and sustainable public grievance redress system in the Government of India was accepted.

Besides these, six ongoing consultancy assignments are shown at Annexures F.1(c) and F.1(d).

Chaturvedi, Chairman, IIPA presided. In his address Shri Chaturvedi mentioned that, despite rapid economic growth, many deprived sections of the society are yet to get their entitlements and dues. He stated that IIPA should act as an intellectual agent of social change, being a premier institution and a think tank it leads and guides the architects of public policies and practitioners of public governance. He observed that the Institute has established itself as an outstanding and prestigious institution in the field of public governance, the credit for which goes to the faculty members of the Institute. He felt that the challenge for IIPA is to undertake capacity building exercises to help deepening of democracy, efficient delivery of public system and services and citizen-friendly administration.

The Meeting was attended by 263 members of the Institute. The House approved the proceedings of the Fifty Third Annual Meeting of the General Body held on 27th October, 2007, the Annual Report, and the Annual Statement of Accounts for the year 2007-2008. FIFTY SECOND MEMBERS' ANNUAL CONFERENCE

The Fifty Second Members' Annual Conference of the Institute was held on Saturday the 27th September, 2008. The theme of the Conference was "Global Warming: The Impact on India". The Director of the Institute in his Welcome Address, highlighted the significance of the theme, while Shri P.G. Dhar Chakrabarty, Executive Director of the National Institute of Disaster Management provided a brief overview.

Prof. Vinod K. Sharma, Faculty of the Institute, presented the theme paper in which he observed that global warming is caused by an increase in the temperature of the earth's lower atmosphere which may lead to climate changes resulting from alterations to regional climatic events such as rainfall patterns, and evaporation and cited some preventive measures. He mentioned that climate induced natural disasters like drought, floods and cyclones posed a serious threat to coastal areas. He emphasized that India is highly vulnerable to climate change as its economy is heavily reliant on climate-sensitive sectors like agriculture and forestry and its low lying densely populated coastline is threatened by a potential rise in sea level. He observed that awareness of the potential benefits of climate mitigation is still limited to specialized circles and has not yet been seriously communicated to all sectors of society, in the particular policymakers and the general public at the global level. According to him, what is most important is synthesis, the overall appreciation of the problems of global climate change and possibilities for correction, bearing in mind regional factors and desirable changes.

The Conference was attended by 236 members. Prior to holding the Annual Conference, 27 Prelude Conferences/Seminars on the Conference were organized by IIPA's Regional/Local Branches at their respective headquarters. Mohanty, Professor of Atmospheric Sciences at IIT, Delhi spoke on "Hydro-meteorological Disasters in Global Warming Scenario". Shri T.N. Chaturvedi, Chairman of IIPA, presided. In his address Prof. Mohanty stated that the increases of greenhouse gases particularly increase of anthropogenic emissions of carbon dioxide are the main reasons for an increase in temperature which plays the dominant role in changing the weather and climate globally as well as regionally. He observed that an increase in surface temperature is a basic reason of change in the intensity, frequency and lifetime of the hydro-meteorological disasters. He elaborated that efforts have been made in a number of climatic research centres worldwide to stimulate climatic conditions with the use of various dynamical atmospheric general circulation models and coupled atmosphere ocean general circulation models to mitigate this phenomenon.

7. Dr. R.K. Bhandari, Geohazard Specialist delivered a special lecture on "Memory of Meadows from the Everest of Science" on January 21, 2009.
8. Dr. Jean-Louis Ermine, Associate Dean, TELECOM School of Management, Paris, France delivered a lecture on "KM Process, from Strategy to Information System on January 28, 2009 at IIPA.
9. IIPA, in collaboration with the Ministry of Women and Child Development (MWCD) & United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), organized a Multi Stakeholder Workshop on GDI and GEM on February 20, 2009.

The MWCD-UNDP-IIPA Multi Stakeholder workshop on GDI and GEM was held at IIPA on 20th February, 2009. Shri Anil Kumar, Secretary MWCD inaugurated the workshop, which was also addressed by Dr. Pronab Sen Chief Statistician of India and Secretary (M/o S&PI), Shri B.S. Baswan, Director IIPA, Smt. Vijayalakshmy K. Gupta, Additional Secretary, MWCD and Sumeeta Banerji, Assistant Resident Representative of UNDP.

UNDP has constructed HDI, GDI and GEM for several countries of the world including India. However, these have been critiqued on several grounds including the fact that they have been developed from a northern perspective, and do not incorporate the perspective of the south. While some attempts have been made in the past to compile HDI, GDI and GEM most of these pertain to the 1990s and are limited to the large States.

Gender disaggregated data and scores and ranks on indices such as GDI and GEM, are tools that can that can meaningfully be used by Government to identify gender based inequities and implement corrective policies, programmes and schemes for gender just and equitable development outcomes. However, the value of these indices is sensitive to choice of indicators and goals posts. What indicators are used in estimating GDI and GEM depends on availability of data for men and women for the chosen indicator.

While significant progress has been made with regard to collection of gender disaggregated data, several gaps remain and this constrains the estimation of GDI and GEM. A few of these are mentioned below:

- Data on Life Expectancy is available only for 16 large States.

- Despite improvements, work force participation rates continue to underestimate the work done by women.
- Data for Mean Years of Education is not readily available.
- Morbidity data does not reflect the situation captured by micro studies.
- Data for credit access below Rs 2 lakhs is not available.
- Data gaps regarding ownership of land and other assets.
- Membership of trade unions.
- Membership of State Planning Boards.
- Membership of Urban Local Bodies

For instance, data for Life Expectancy is available from the official data gathering machinery for only 16 out of 35 States/UTs. Despite the severe data gaps pertaining to Life Expectancy whether at Birth or at age 1, this indicator is widely used. While adjustments are made, they provide a second-best solution. Further, estimates are not available at the district level. Similarly, for All India Services, data for men and women is available under one cadre of (i) (AGMUTs) for the states and union territories of Arunachal Pradesh, Goa, Mizoram, Andaman & Nicobar Islands, Chandigarh, Dadra & Nagar Haveli, Daman & Diu, Delhi, Lakshadweep, and Puducherry, (ii) (AM) for Assam and Meghalaya and (iii) (MT) for states of Manipur and Tripura.

The Draft Report entitled "Gendering Human Development Index: Recasting GDI and GEM for India" was presented. Professor Amitabh Kundu, Jawaharlal Nehru University and Member, National Statistical Commission chaired and led the discussion session with a panel of experts comprising Dr AK Shiva Kumar, UNICEF, Dr Santosh Mehrotra, Planning Commission and Dr Preet Rustagi, Institute of Human Development. A large number of valuable suggestions were received from the workshop participants. These included the need to highlight data inadequacies that were identified; the limitations caused by lack of gender disaggregated data; the fact that since the constitutional amendments led to increased representation of women in PRIs, GDI and GEM should be estimated with and without representation in PRIS; the importance of recognizing that indices are not just statistical estimates but also raise political issues; and the need to scan report for drawing out policy implications. The comments are being incorporated in the final report.
